GENDER, CLIMATE CHANGE AND URBANISATION: REVISITING THE LINKS

Lagos - Image credit: Adriana Allen

Debates on climate change have evolved significantly over the last decades but only recently have the urban and gendered nature of this process become distinct and significant components of discussions. However, the intersection of the three elements - or the 'gendered' nature of climate change in urban areas - remains little explored in our increasingly urbanising world. Ahead of COP21 in Paris, the event will broach this increasingly urgent matter through the projection of a short film, followed by an expert panel debate.

Speakers:

Claudy Vouhé (Francophone network Genre en Action), Julian Walker (Development Planning Unit, UCL), and Virginie Le Masson (Overseas Development Institute / CDKN).

Chaired by Adriana Allen (Development Planning Unit, UCL).

This event is organised by Barbara Lipietz and Caren Levy (Development Planning Unit, UCL) and supported by the Institut Français du Royaume Uni. It is part of a DPU-Genre en Action collaboration.
